General

The traffic ordinance includes general rules for stopping and parking. Restrictions for stopping and parking are not always designated by road signs. However, motorists must still be aware of restrictions.

There are also local restrictions for stopping and parking. These regulations are adapted to local conditions and are usually indicated by road signs.

The following are some of the most important regulations.

Parking regulations are based on two main principles.

You must not stop or park so that you:

- endanger others
- obstruct or inconvenience others.

- You may not park your vehicle on a street or a public road for longer than 24 hours on weekdays and weekdays before Sundays and public holidays. This does not apply when the general rules prohibit stopping or parking, for example on the crest of a hill, at a junction, on a priority road or where special road markings say otherwise.

In built-up areas, you must not stop or park in public places off the road, for example in ditches, on road verges, in parks, in green areas or similar.

You must not park your vehicle so that any wheel is outside the parking space.

- You may not open the doors so that you can cause danger for others.
- When you have stopped or parked you must ensure that the vehicle cannot begin to roll.
- You must ensure that no one else can use your vehicle accidentally.
- You may only stop or park on the right-hand side of the road in the direction of the traffic flow.
 - On one-way roads you may park on the left hand side.
- You must stop or park as close to the roadside as possible. Outside built-up areas, you must stop or park off the road if it is possible.
- You must not park in such a way that obstructs others from gaining access to their vehicles.
 - You must not park so as to obstruct other vehicles from driving away.
 - The following applies to parking tickets and similar, no matter if you have to pay a parking fee or not:
 - It must be placed in the wind-screen of the vehicle. If this is not possible, it should be placed on the vehicle.
 - Parking times or other information which show that parking restrictions have been respected shall be clearly visible and legible from outside the vehicle.
- For parking discs or similar, the following applies:
 - The time must be set to the next following half hour counted from the time when you parked the vehicle.
 - If the vehicle is parked before a time limit starts and will continue to be parked after the time limit begun, the time on the parking disc must be set at the time the time limit begins.
 - Parking disc or equivalent is only necessary when the vehicle is parked during the period when time limit applies.
 - The disc must be placed in the windscreen of the vehicle. If this is not possible, it should be placed on the vehicle.
 - The parking time shall be clearly visible and legible from outside the vehicle.

You must not park here

Pedestrian zone

Residential area

You may only park on marked parking spaces in a pedestrian zone or a residential area.

- You must not park within 30 metres of a level crossing. A level crossing is an intersection between a road and a railway track or tramway that runs in its own track embankment.
- You must not park in front of a vehicle entrance to a property, or in such a way that makes it difficult to drive into or out of a property.

- You must not park at a bus or tram stop. You may stop, but only to set down or pick up passengers and in such a way as not to obstruct the bus or tram. This restriction applies to the bus or tram stop area marked on the carriageway.

If there is no such marking, then the restriction applies 20 metres before and 5 metres after the bus or tram stop.

- You may not park at a designated passing point that are signposted as such (blue sign with the letter M).

You must not park on a priority road.

You must not park alongside another vehicle that has stopped or parked at the side of the road. You must not park next to an object, such as a container, that has been placed there.

- on a bicycle path

You must not stop or park on a pedestrian crossing or closer than 10 metres before a pedestrian crossing.

You must not stop or park at a road junction or closer than 10 metres before the nearest edge of the intersection.

- You must not stop or park at a railway or tramway junction.
- You must not stop or park so as to conceal road signs or traffic signals.
- You must not stop or park on a motorway or expressway.
- You must not stop or park:
 - on a bicycle crossing or a bicycle passage or closer than 10 metres before a bicycle crossing or a bicycle passage,
 - on a crossing cycle path or pedestrian path,
 - in an underpass or tunnel,
 - close to the crest of a hill or in bends where visibility is not sufficient,
 - alongside of a solid line if the distance between the vehicle and the line is less than 3 metres. However if there is a broken line between the vehicle and the solid line, then you may stop or park,
 - on a bicycle lane,
 - on a prohibited area,
 - in a roundabout,
 - on a lane for public transport.

Parking fines

Police and local authority parking attendants are responsible for enforcing parking regulations on streets and public roads.

If you park illegally where public parking rules or municipal parking regulations apply then you may have to pay a parking fine. The person responsible for supervising attaches payment request to the vehicle or gives it to the driver. The vehicle owner is responsible for paying. The vehicle owner is responsible for ensuring that the fine is paid.

You must pay the fine even if you believe the fine is incorrect. The fine must be paid within the stipulated time. If you do not pay on time then a reminder is sent out followed by an injunction for payment to the vehicle owner. The fine is raised following an injunction. If the owner still fails to pay, the matter is transferred to the executory authority for collection.

If you have received a parking fine that you believe is incorrect, then you can appeal. Contact the police authority named on the parking ticket. If your appeal is successful then the police authority will cancel your liability for payment of the penalty charge. If the appeal is refused then the vehicle owner can appeal against liability to pay the fine. He or she must then write to the police authority and list the reasons and evidence why they are not liable for payment. This must be done within 6 months after the fine has been paid or the executory authority has taken measures for collecting the fine. If the police still rejects the appeal, then he or she can appeal to the city court.

If your liability for payment is cancelled then you will receive a refund of your parking fine.

Fines

On private property or similar a landowner can stipulate conditions for parking or that parking is not permitted. The landowner often employs a private security company for supervising.

If you park against the regulations you may pay a fine. Fines can only be charged if the information about the prohibition of parking or the terms of parking are indicated by road signs.

The person responsible for supervising attaches a payment request to the vehicle or gives it to the driver. The driver and the vehicle owner are equally responsible for paying the fine.

If you believe you have been incorrectly fined, then you must contact the landowner or the security company that are indicated on the additional panel.

Regulations for how these fines are collected is slightly different compared with public parking fines. The procedure is similar to a normal invoice, but the driver and vehicle owner are jointly and liable for payment. Following the reminder, the landowner can demand payment and as a final resort turn to the courts.

Vehicle removals

Incorrectly parked vehicles may be removed. The local authority, the police or the Transport Administration's regions can make the decision to remove a vehicle. Removal could be necessary if the vehicle has parked

- so that it is obstructing traffic or causing danger
- so that it is obstructing snow clearance or road cleaning
- continuously in the same place for at least three days (72 hours)
- in a parking space reserved for disable persons
- on a lane for public transport
- on a pedestrian or cycle path
- on or up to five metres before a pedestrian crossing, bicycle passage or a bicycle crossing.

The vehicle can also be removed if it has been issued with a driving ban, has no registration plates, must not be used because of unpaid vehicle tax, has no vehicle insurance or the owner of the vehicle has unpaid parking fines for a total amount of more than SEK 5,000.

The vehicle will usually be removed to a car pound. As a vehicle owner you are liable for all costs relating to the removal of the vehicle.

The police must be notified when the local authority or the Transport Administration's region makes the decision to remove a vehicle. If you suspect that your vehicle has been removed, contact the police.
